Mac News Briefs: Snowtape adds online radio directory

Also announced: Updates for Profcast, SQLiteManager by Macworld Staff, Macworld.com

Vemedio said Thursday that its Snowtape application for Internet radio recording now features an online radio directory that automatically updates once new stations are available. More than 750 radio stations have been added so far.

Other changes introduced in Snowtape 1.1 include a revamped user interface and scaling cover view. The new release is compatible with Mac OS X 10.6, the forthcoming

Snow Leopard update.

The $29 Snowtape lets you record your favorite music, add album artwork and export it to iTunes.—Peter Cohen

Profcast gets bug fixes, new podcast publishing option

Humble Daisy's ProfCast is a presentation recording tool for professionals and educators. The software helps you record lectures, including PowerPoint and Keynote slides, then publish them as podcasts.

A new 2.6.0 release of the recording application offers bug fixes while adding the ability to publish recordings directly to a Podcast Producer installation. Podcast Producer is Apple's podcast processing and publishing system.

ProfCast 2.6.0 is a free update for all customers; it costs $60 to register.—PC

SQLiteManager updated to version 3.

SQLabs has released SQLiteManager 3.0, a new SQLite database management software application. Priced at $49, the software helps you open and work with SQLite 2 and SQLite 3 databases, in-memory databases, AES 128-encrypted databases and REAL Server databases using a GUI. It lets you create and browse tables, views, triggers and indices.

The 3.0 release of SQLiteManager adds table editing features, interface improvements, and a new Chart panel to help you visualize data. System requirements call for Mac OS X 10.4 or later.—PC
